If God Was A Woman

Richie Sambora

If God was a woman With long blond hair Would you kneel at her altar And offer her prayer Could she be your addiction Could she make you sin If God was a woman And you were her man If God was a woman Would you be impressed If she showed up in high heels And a pretty red dress Would you make a donation Or would you draw the line Would you yield to temptation Or savor her wine

If God was a woman She'd come like an angel Or a devil in disguise When she left in the morning Would you lose your religion Of kiss your faith goodbye, goodbye If God was a woman

If God was a woman Tell me who could we blame Would she make Jesus righteous Or completely insame Of God was a woman Would she kiss and tell Would we wind up in heaven Or would we all burn in hell

If God was a woman She'd come like an angel Or the devil in disguise, oh yeah And if she left in the morning Would you lose your religion Or kiss your faith goodbye, goodbye If God was a woman And you were her man, yeah

If God was a woman Would she come like an angel Or the devil in disguise, oh yeah When she left in the morning Would you lose your religion Would you kiss your faith goodbye, goodbye

If God was a woman We'd all burn in hell Woman, woman, woman, woman If God was a woman Tell me who would we blame If God was a woman If God was a woman She'd drive us insane, yeah
