Wires and Waves

There are twelve hours There's a day between us And you called to say you're sorry in your own way

There are oceans and waves and wires between us And you called to say you're getting older

And sometimes planes they smash up in the sky And sometimes lonely hearts they just get lonelier

How did you survive all those fires and floods? How did you survive your insufferable friends? It was the plow that broke the western plains And its just my heart gets rejected by my veins

And sometimes planes they smash up in the sky And sometimes lonely hearts they just get lonelier And lonelier

And sometimes lonely hearts they just get lonelier
