Hideaway

Rock Kills Kid

Because you say, don't mean you mean it Run away to find a home Happy now but you don't see it Run away because you're all alone

And you'll never know what could have been And you'll never see what might have been And you'll never know what could have been And you'll never see what might have been

Dead inside, you wait for something Innocence lost so long ago No one cares so why should you? Run away because you're all alone

And you'll never know what could have been And you'll never see what might have been And you'll never know what could have been And you'll never see what might have

Because you say, don't mean you mean it Run away to find a home Now I'll let you in, yeah, I'll let you in, yeah

And you'll never know what could have been And you'll never see what might have been And you'll never know what could have been And you'll never see what might have been

And you'll never know And you'll never know