It's a common misconception about a man's role in this world A provider and survivor and a winner who must never fail But oh how he needs a woman to reassure and give him strength through the darkest nights and the hardest fights when there's no other corner left When the world outside is threatening and all his dreams have been destroyed take him in your arms watch all his guards melt like a little boy

Tell him you really need him
Tell him you really care
Tell him you'll never leave him
He'll be satisfied

And he may not find it easy to say what's on his mind When he's full of doubt say "we'll work it out" God knows how hard he's trying And he may never buy you roses and forget to notice your hair but as long as he says "I love you my dear" that's all you need to hear

Tell him you really need him
Tell him you'll always care
Tell him you'll never leave him
He'll be satisfied

And they say the heart's a hunter but it's truth you can't deny He may never be everything you want but for you he'd lay down and die So Friday night when the phone rings and he's stuck in a downtown bar roll away the stone cause the last mile home is the longest mile of them all

Tell him you really need him
Tell him you'll always care
Tell him you'll never leave him
He'll be satisfied
Tell him you really want him Tell him you understand and tell him that you love him
He'll be satisfied
