

Time Signals Progress

Roses Are Red

Don't say you're sorry. I've heard it far too many times. We play these stupid games from a million miles away. But I don't care. As long as I can hold you when I'm there. It's one a.m. back home. I call you on the phone. Just two shadows in the sky. Just for tonight. You speak to me in rhymes, reminding me of all the times the wrong words say upon my tongue unspoken. It's two a.m. back home. I can't do this on my own. Just two shadows in the sky. Stay for a while, cause we might be onto something, baby. As I say goodbye, I can see myself in the reflection in your eyes. Don't say you're sorry. I've heard it far too many times. Another summer night. We drive until it's light. Add another to the list of plans I have to make you mine. It's three a.m. back home. We're finally alone. Just two shadows in the sky. Stay for a while baby, I'll savor you.