

The Angel And The Raven

Rough Silk

one stormy night an angel fell the raven sold his dreams in hell to keep the light from burning skies like he's been told to roll the dice the angel smiled and said hello I'm just a tale from long ago the endless mile I've walked alone I've roamed the trail of tears and stone fogs rise - when dream s decay fools - wise - who dares to say it's over now - it's over now - somehow - somehow the wheel stopped turning it's over now - it's over now - it's over now and real the raven laughed and then he cried of war and blood and those who died "...one friend to have is worth the weight and what you've got - you'll see too late..."