

A Cautionary Tale

Sabbat

Faustus begin thine incantations, take good care to draw thy circle true, by God must you prevail - for if you fail these demons make a meal of you.
Your soul shall be their meat - a kingly feast for them to eat, beware your future at hand, alas for thou art damned.

GOOD ANGEL:

"Faustus seek repentance, labjure this evil art,
cease this wretched wickedness and cleans thy foolish heart, for the evil that once served you has made of you a slave, and transformed your bed of roses' to a premature grave."
Then in a mighty flash of light before thee Mephistopheles appears.

FAUSTUS:

"I charge thee go and change thy shape, for you fill my soul with fear.
Now swift-as-hell back to the fire return an old Franciscan Friar."

MEPHISTOPHELES:

"Mortal command me while you can,
For surely thou art damned."

BAD ANGEL:

"Faustus be thou resolute in what thou wilt perform, ignore these righteous idiots - their trinity to scorn, for years of depravation you receive eternal life, but fame and wealth and maidens-fair are by far the better price."

FAUSTUS:

"Temptations all around me, is there nowhere I can turn?
Hellfire is all about me, now I know that I shall burn, I face excommunication for the error of my ways -
to burn in Hell for all my days.
Bell, book and candle,
candle, book, bell,
forwards and backwards
to damn me to Hell.
Jehova I beg thee have mercy on my soul.
Be gone foul beast that stands before me, my God! The midnight hour chimes, oh Lord have mercy he comes for me, I haven't got much time.
I am awake this is no dream, I cry - but terror takes my scream, and now my future is at hand, also for I am damned."

GOOD ANGEL:

"Think for just one moment and I'm sure that you will see, the moral of this story - that what shall be must be.
He who gives his soul to Hell, must dare to pay the price, he versed in divinity must live a noble life -
OR ELSE HE IS DAMNED!
