We'll Sleep Until Sunset

Salt The Wound

We'll brake out of prison. We'll swim the moat to safety. The stars fall around me. To guide my way. The path that I lead. Is it worth it? Again if I stop I will fail. The words constantly haunt me. My body is much to frail.

Is it what I've waited for. Why am I so scared?

Sleepless night and hunger. Couldn't be farther from my mind. Yet each day my body screams enough, enough. What has become of my faith. I have tried this way of living. I have tried this way of living. And it doesn't seem to be working.

The path that I lead. Is it worth it? Again if I stop I will fail. The words constantly haunt me. My body is much to frail.

This is harder than it looks but, This pavement calls my name. And I have to go where I'm needed the most.

I have slept at 80 miles and hour for way to long. I need some peace. I need some sleep.

This is what I've waited for. Why am I so scared.
