Even Born Again

I'm testament to old and new there's a thin red river running through and my eyes are like this golden gates holding testament to each love we face even born again

The world over the world begun let us prostitute our mouths for fun be easy with your words and truth if I'm lost with God I'm lost with you I'm even born again

The rain had come to make it new to clear our minds from all the dew the sky was watercolor thin and our mouths were open wide I'm even born again

Pink and orange and blue and white I remember what the sky looked like I remember how your face looked too that was perfection even born again

We're all orphans I think our hearts just feed and when death (dies to us?) it becomes this deed and I would gladly die for you selfishly but willingly I'm even born again Sarah Jaffe
