

I thought I knew you but I was wrong when I see you today I don't understand how could you change that much it's your life I won't tell you how to live it but question you and your ideals what did you believe in was it just an attitude you thought was cool back then? Once you wanted to change the world but the world changed you you won't admit it's true you've become what you hated most of all back then now you've betrayed all those ideals that you once believed in or was it just an attitude you thought was cool back then Now you've become a statistic figure a number on a list with no personality or individuality just a status climber with materialistic needs who soon will live in the United States of Europe's Asshole Bureaucrats