A voice trembles in the distance Your words they hurt my ears As it resonates throughout the night skies Such convincing repetitions As it swallows us whole So take your time

And high above my head Resting in the sound

Will you sing me something than I can understand? At least anything to ease the thought So hold onto what you've got Because we gave it our best We gave it our all

I can feel the worst is over Comprehended by the eye Like a storm, we slowly die In the ever-passing moment We are further brushed away In doubt, we stay

Will you sing me something than I can understand? At least anything to ease the thought So hold onto what you've got Because we gave it our best We gave it our all

Will you sing me something than I can understand? At least anything to ease the thought So hold onto what you've got Because we gave it our best We gave it our all We gave it our all
