

Door Into Summer

Screaming Trees

One day more has come and gone
The rain goes on, the trees stay drowned
And like children play strange games
With old ancient parts they come upon

On the eastern tide
And the shadows bask in the sky
Where I find we're the door into summer light
She lies, she lies

The dream has lost, so far from home
There's no shelter from the storm
The forest leaves, where all the leaves
Got up from this world of pain

On the eastern tide
And the shadows bask in the sky
Where I'd find, at the door into summer light
She lies, she lies

One day more has come and gone
The rain goes on, the trees stay drowned
Like children play strange games
With old ancient parts they come upon

On the eastern tide
And the shadows cast in the sky
Where I find we're the door into summer light
She lies, she lies, oh, yeah, yeah, ye