

There's more than a feeling
Than a differing mind to anatomy
On my own who's going to hold me?
A burning heart lifts me up to my life
I can't run from the truth and I won't try
'Cause it wouldn't matter who you were in this world
There's nothing on earth that we can't change
But on the inside I could never be the same
Came into the garden, babe
Oh, you got to come on in
Come into the secret garden
We're changing the way we're made
And in our own eyes
We're going to move the mountain
So how do you see me now? Can you see me?
Don't butter me up and tell me lies
I've seen the black and white colored in your eyes
But trapped in a cage is not the place
You can leave me or cover it up to ease your mind
In this confusion I can always see the light into the garden
Come into the garden, babe
Oh, come on in
Come into the secret garden
We're changing the way we're made
You'll never know it feels not to be one thing or the other
If there was a world without hypocrisy
You never know I might just be something you need
It wouldn't matter who you were in this world
Knowing yourself is so much more
Take one step forward and you open up the door
Come into the garden, babe
Oh, come on in
Come into the secret garden
We're changing the way we're made
Come into the garden, babe
Oh, come on in
Come into the secret garden
We're changing the way we're made
Come into the garden, babe
Oh, come on in
