All At Once (it's Not Important)

Secret Machines

Underneath the sun there is a light I'm feeling light, but I can't move My heart's still in a crescent veil A watchful haze in the rushing night A silver studded torn and tattered gown She ruled the room and I just stared A warning roaring miles above Hanging over a worn-out night And though the words we spoke were few We were feeling something strange I swear I thought you knew You said "Darling, how could you?" Remember back when we first met It don't mean much All those things you said, you never meant How could I forgive and just forget? And all that time we spent I swear we wasted It don't mean much And all at once it's not important What fell in place just falls apart Again, I guess Not having, I can only hope It's only time and you know I'll wait 'Cause then it's like when we first met It don't mean much All those things I said, I never meant But how could you forgive and just forget? And all that time we spent we said we wasted It don't mean much
