Consolation Prize

Sharon Van Etten

I came to you, My conscience clean, Blood on my knees.

The moral of the story Is don't walk away again.

I called you out, To see my bow, Our final scene.

The moral of the story Is don't look away again, To find a better conversation.

I saw you there, Your friends aware, Without a care.

The moral of the story Is don't lie to me again To find a better conversation, So I can be your consolation prize

You ran away To stand your ground, Look what I found.

The moral of the story Is don't walk away again, To find a better conversation, So I can be your consolation prize. To find a better conversation, No, I'll never be your consolation prize
