

Leviathan, Bound

Shearwater

the hollow light
is still on the fields where the winter has warmed and the snows have drained away and the hunter's cry
is still on the air
as the bullet flies home but the heart that's pierced with it still is racing
still is racing, alone.

the silver shoals
of the light in the deep brush the glitterin skein where the great, dark body writhes and the trembling jaw
the unfathoming sounds
of leviathan, bound
as his heart, though weakening

you are racing
you are racing,
alone.
