

I Want to Get Married

Showbread

When you close your eyes even your eyelids are beautiful for so long there have been traces of you in blood vessels inside my skull that coarse you eagerly through me into my hands that reach for you I love you and I always will it's all so sweetly beautifully true and time just makes you so much more wonderful swimming in the ocean that's drifting in your eyes I'm walking on a fine line of elation and joy to see the eyes of you

The things are surfacing since years and years ago leaving me to wonder off in search of all I know

Porcelain skin and the dizzying smile the eyes holding forever blue just know that I'm in love with you know that I'm in love with you

So hold me now as I'm holding you and treasure what we know is true on my own would never really be alone unless it's without you

And we go on against scrapes and sores we break the doors we will be together you will lift my heart and move my soul for all that I am and all that we are they won't pick apart the truth to spread the lies inside of it disabling and rendering the truth under it's opposite

Remember me I'm yours today and if you will come to me and if you stay I'll offer all I have and sacrifice myself to cherish you the wind is getting colder and the years are getting older I won't ever know the feeling of giving up on you oh beautiful and fair and amazingly true my heart my eyes and everything is a sentiment to you created in the image of love that's everlasting and I draw her out in the future I'd been mapping

Across the sea beyond the sky even after we lay down to die I'll love you forever and I'll love you again I'll love you after every single thing ends