

Waiting Four Years

Silverstein

I gave you everything,
but it just wasn't enough to make you stay.
You said you'd give me time and space again.
I asked to see you everyday.

Now I'm waiting four year just to feel your touch,
waiting four whole years to say how much I care.
The flowers I gave you, died, lost and been thrown away, just l ike me.

Life has passed me by, reflected in my eye.
Never again will I have you beside me, you to be there.
The years behind cost more than I'll ever have.
More than I'll ever have,
More than I will ever have.

Now I'm waiting four years just to hear your voice,
waiting four whole years to lie right by your side.
I waited all this time, just to see your smile.
I waited all this time, to say how much I care.

Can you see me?
Can you see me?
Can you see me?
Can you see me?
Can you see me?
Can you see me?
Can you see me?
