Pointing Bone

Siouxsie and the Banshees

From the fury pit, a reek of misery Like a trumpet groan, tornado moan The splendor splits like a golden skin He and the wizards cry like humming birds In treasure glows, your weeping wings And a slaughter grins, on a pleasure spike

When held on high by the riverside Like a torn-throat child In a jackals hide Cool water dies, vile diamond eyes

Silent in flamingo ease Distant in troubled trance Within a whirlpool, we're breaking our backs The tears of the moon The sweat of the sun Sacrificial hearts for a pointing bone With a Gorgon's head and a cloak of skulls They're kindling fires in open wounds Pointing bone

In a jaguar skin, blood matted mane Beacons blaze toward a waning moon When held on high by the riverside Like a torn-throat child In a jackals hide Cool water dies, vile diamond eyes

The tears of the moon The sweat of the sun Sacrificial hearts for a pointing bone