

Evening Star

Six Degrees of Separation

Evening Star you're my guide, my fate and my soul
Evening Star I hug you in my heart
One last touch, one last smile and your lips whispering: "Good
Bye"
And that's all, this play should be over
One last touch, one last embrace and fading shape of fading face
You have left and my heart grows colder
I gave you my heart, I gave you my soul
I gave you my trust, you've trampled it all
I believed your eyes - those jewels like stars
I believed you all and now I'm going to fall
To break me down, to ruin me down
Thank you for the madness, thank you for the blasphemy
For weeks of constant pain, for tears and suffering
Thank you for the poison, for scars and broken dreams
I will always wonder, what it was meant to be
One last touch, one last smile and your lips whispering: "Good
Bye"
And that's all, this play should be over
One last touch, one last embrace and fading shape of fading face
You have left and my heart grows colder
I gave you my heart, I gave you my soul
I gave you my trust, you've trampled it all
I believed your eyes - those jewels like stars
I believed you all and now I'm going to fall
To break me down, to ruin me down
Whatever kills my pain, that would end this agony
I will beat every stone to find it in my last flight to destiny
But how to escape from strokes of fate? How to get rid of the burden?
Shades of fallen past still encage me, like icy screams of my fate