

You Are Enough

Sleeping at Last

When we woke up
The world was figured out
Beyond the beauty we've dreamt about.
This brilliant light is brighter than we've known,
Without our darkness to prove it so.
Still, we can't help but to examine it,
To add our question marks to periods.
At the foot of our bed, we found an envelope...

"You are enough."
These little words, somehow they're changing us.
"You are enough."
So we let our shadows fall away like dust.

When we grew up,
Our shadows grew up too.
But they're just old ghosts
That we grow attached to.
The tragic flaw is that they hide the truth

That you're enough.
I promise you're enough.
I promise you're enough, I promise you.

"You are enough."
These little words, somehow they're changing us.
"You are enough,"
So we let our shadows fall away like dust.
"You are enough."
These little words, somehow they're changing us.
Let it go, let it go, "You are enough."
So we let our shadows fall away like dust.
