

Race the Seas

Solar Fragment

In this maze of green and white in a forest dark and wild In have been before or will I be?
I lost my sense of time

Three years I roamed in hell alone I felt like dying but I can't Suddenly there is a distant voice from outside so close the book again and risk a flash of light

I have to race the seas to regain my honor to be worthy of loving you, my bride

I wonder is there a place left on earth or is it gone since I've turned the key?
Only your picture will keep me sane
I can see the prints of your feet on the beach but at every spot they are leading away from me and I fear that with a splashing wave they are drawn back to the sea

I have to race the seas...

And then the tide will rise again but you're out of sight So for a while I'll rest here by the shore until my future will recur

Now you are stuck under the same old star and there is no way out, believe me I have tried them all So sit down, let's have that whiskey without jar it seems like yesterday that I've seen your final fate

There's a trap somewhere around better watch your step Don't be brave just let her down
You will drown and when the lightning strikes you and you die my precognitions fade and I see you in another life

I have to race the seas...

And then the tide will rise again...
