

Climbing out of the sky
A man who could a fly and a painting anyone could play
It's a comic book crush that taught you to trust
Staring out from the stands
At a rock n roll band
And a hero no one else could save
It was never much
But it's all that you gave

And I wonder, if you wonder Or did your stars finally explode
Did the thunder pull you underneath the haze
I'm amazed what you don't show

Little Minds let little pain
Burn big old dreams with little flames
And you don't think I understand
Little holes in parachutes
Won't leave you falling
If they do
It's because you want to land

Climbing out of his chair
To fix the TV glare
Is a man, but no one knows he's there
It's a Dramamine dream that keeps us awake but lost
She keeps her plastic friends and a brand new Benz
She always says "hell, sometimes life ain't fair"
It's a comic book crush that got them nowhere

And I wonder, If she wonders
Or did her star finally explode
Did the thunder pull her underneath the haze
I'm amazed what we don't know

Little Minds let little pain
Burn big old dreams with little flames
And you don't think I understand
Little holes in parachutes
Won't leave you falling
If they do
It's because you want to land

These elevator doors are closing
Again you leave before I planned
I can taste you walking down the hall
You left your perfume on the night stand
