

John, Let Me Go

Sondre Lerche

Do you have enough to fill the page?
Is there something I should read?
After fires broke the news today
I was whispering the details

When the world came in, I've seen it before
Wearing shimmering cloaks
Is the world worth its spending?
Is that worm worth me defending it?

How should I know when the phone
Attacks with numbers I don't trust?
John, let me go, I can conjugate myself
If the investigation fails, I'm on my own

Well, the coward sits alone again
When you spent your feathers out, out
Making sense is made impossible
Making you detect my inapt

When I'm answering I've seen this before
You are changing things
In a world full of sorrow
Only fools with narrow eyes can join

How could I know the calls
I make with numbers I don't trust?
John, let me go, I can conjugate myself
If the investigation fails, my head will roll

How should I know?
I could conjugate myself
If the investigation fails, I'm on my own

John, let me go
John, let me go
John, let me go
John, let me go
