

Crossroads

Soraya

Jamie said my body's tired, I've got to get some rest I've been pacing around for hours trying to understand this fate step by step and around

I go in and out of my memory a flashback here, a vision there, I never quite felt so free

Strange how some moments have just faded strange how some feeli ngs just aren't there I'm standing at the crossroads of this wo rld that waits for me it lures me with caresses like a feather on my cheek soothing me to sleep And all the restlessness that consumed me has disappeared and all my yearnings to fight it ha ve gone with my last tear I throw my life into the hands of a f orce I cannot see I pull away from what I know and unite with w hat I believe in

Strange how some moments have just faded strange how some feeli ngs just aren't there I'm standing at the crossroads of this wo rld that waits for me it lures me with caresses like a feather on my cheek soothing me to sleep

Though I've loved you all I know I've earned my turn to think o f me and only me Here's to all we've known to the cross that we have born something is coming to set me free ...

I'm standing at the crossroads of this world that waits for me it lures me with caresses like a feather on my cheek soothing m e to sleep