Endless Farewell

Soul Asylum

Rise and shine, keep your razor sharp Size up yourself in the mirror A slice of life to last throughout the year But sooner or later it all comes back to you And we will remember the fine things you can do I'm giving back all the things that you gave to me I'm saving up the price to pay the decree Remember the first time you saw the rising sun You may be done but I've just begun The leaves are burning and the ashes have blown away I'm turning over new leaves almost every day You let him think you'd just as soon stay You let him think you had nothing to say Now you want me just to let you go away To find some mangled security, some strangled form of purity To restore your faith and all the things you've come to hate You give and you take and you leave, leave it alone What I want so badly for this to be a place you can call home And I haven't felt this way since yesterday, but I don't rememb er when What I want so badly to be someone you can call a friend till w e meet again Endless farewell Hello, hello, hello again Endless farewell