By The Time You Catch Your Heart

By the drug that's in your eye By the line that's on your mind These things are ours it's only time It all depends which side you find

He might come unstuck He might right us off But write us off a thousand times I write a song about a time

For such an open mind There's a fear so strong inside By the time you catch your heart Your good intentions fall apart

He might come unstuck He might right us off But write us off a thousand times I write a song about a time

Each night remains the early part In terms of love that falls apart And by the time you catch your heart By the love you had from the start
