

Twenty Nothing

Spector

I lost track of time, remind me how it started
A motorcade of kids all headed to a party
I still had a best friend, didn't have ambition
Real talk, when did it become a competition
I would value anything if it would value me

Now he's got a cast, someone to go to bed with
I wanted to learn but lessons were expensive
Instead I'm riding shotgun, wondering how he feels
Now his car's got two third wheels
I would value anything if it would value me
I remember the last time that we spoke and you said to me

I'm going back to the place I love
I'm going back to the things I know
There's a part of me you should never see
Maybe I'll always be
Twenty nothing

Girl I know we're stuck but let's move at our own pace
Heard he was your rock, does that make me your hard place
Maybe I'm dull, too old to meet your parents
Four or five years, well what's the fucking difference

I would value anything if it would value me
I remember the last time that we spoke and you said to me

I'm going back to the place I love
I'm going back to the things I know
There's a part of me you should never see
Maybe I'll always be
Twenty nothing

I'm going back to the place I love
I'm going back to the things I know
There's a part of me you should never see
Maybe I'll always be
Twenty nothing

One, you started coming over
Two, you started sleeping over
Three, you started taking over
Four, you told me it was over

One, you started coming over
Two, you started sleeping over
Three, you started taking over
Four, you told me it was over

I'm going back to the place I love
I'm going back to the things I know
There's a part of me you should never see
Maybe I'll always be
Twenty nothing

One, you started coming over
Two, you started sleeping over

Three, you started taking over
Four, you told me it was over

One, you started coming over
Two, you started sleeping over
Three you started taking over
Four, you told me it was over

I'm going back to the place I love
