

Where Has Our Love Gone

Stars Go Dim

I used to turn the radio on
And think that every love song
Was a perfect description of our love (Is somebody watching us?)
And now when we turn it off
All we hear is talk radio
Screaming back and forth
Is this all just noise and static?

Its breaking up
Like an AM station
Where has our love gone to?
And how do we get back to the feelings that once filled the air waves?
And have we let the little things in this world catch up to us and take away our favorite songs?
All we're left with is wondering how and where has our love gon e to?

Replaced our stereo
Traded old speakers for new ones
But still the sound of our love kept going in and out We're taking all this junk back
We tried everything from rewiring the whole machine
We tried to push all the buttons but all we got mad at each oth er
Seems like the same old song and yet

Where has our love gone to?
And how do we get back to the feelings that once filled the air waves?
And have we let the little things in this world catch up to us,
now and take away our favorite songs?
All we're left with is wondering how and where, where has our l ove gone to?

If we only learned to listen to one another We'd know, we'd know why the reception was clear and our love s ongs will be the hits of tomorrow
And they'll be playing our songs forever

Where has our love gone to?
And how do we get back to the feelings that once filled the air waves?
And have we let the little things in this world catch up to us,
now and take away our favorite songs?
Don't you take away, don't you take away our favorite songs
Don't you take away our favorite

And all our songs
Are they gone?
Where has our love gone?
