

like a favorite slave, who's learned to hide behind the chains your presence sickens me, i'm trying to tell you something born into your bonds, played the puppet all along but so quick to dismiss me, do you even know what's out there?
cast this world aside, they'll bleed you till there's nothing left, no limits to their lives, their end is never changing all that you can see, kneels at His feet in sovereignty. time is complete, all that you can know will praise his name as you will.
little finite minds, masters of their finite lives but always seem to come up empty needing kingdoms built from birth but death reclaims them all to o earth
dust to dust and memories and this orchestral masterpiece can only end in tragedy.
can you hear God laughing deep unto deep
all creation braces for the passing of this time.
