Dakota

Steel Train

Please remember the nights that we spent
In the city where you lay
We were young and nearly famous
But lighting strikes and building fall
And everything changed
Common dakota tell me you dont wish i was still the same

I know a man dressed as a woman

Heels, curly wig and nails

Fell for a boy who sold him powder and pills

And the younger boy

With the older man

He made it all wrong

And in dakota these awful things burn away with the sun

Yes in dakota this awful things are gone with morning sun

There was a boy who sang his song just different So they stabbed him in the arms Blood washed down him like a faucet He cried for help And no one came He died in the rain And in dakota one day he will wake up unchanged Yes in dakota one day YOU will wake up unchained

Please remember the nights we spent alone
In the city where you lay
We are young and nearly famous
But thunder cracks and buildings burn
Everything will change
Common dakota i know we can always be the same
And in dakota i know we can always be the same
Yes in dakota its ok to feel a little strange
