

Night Falls

Steel Train

Time has shown it's face
Too many words, Too many hopes and too much we've learned

Life won't wait in comfortable chairs
You look so bleak without a care

Sometimes her eyes close before nightfall
And sometimes my eyes close before nightfall
Cancer calls

Dancing on the seems
Leaves from a tree, all that fades and all that we feed

I can be brave if you can be bare
Stripping the life and taking what's there

Take these wings and learn to fly
Hold these eyes which never cry
Watch on me just like a child
