

Electric Chair

Steelheart

I thought I left it all behind
Again I stand with my tongue all tied
All twisted up as life unfolds
The world around me spins so cold, so cold
Should I pack my bags in case
If heaven lies in the wings of fate
Here I stand a naked man
Stripped me down with my pride in hand

Oh, it such a shame
The truth is lies and they're all the same

Very well, sit alone in your electric chair
I won't stand by you
And watch you drown in your world

Ice cold people runnin' in mid stream
They're drawing a picture it's not what it seems Oh I can see right through them, it's so clear
It's building up the pressure in between my ears

Very well, sit alone in your electric chair
I won't stand by you
And watch you drown in your world
