Sink Like A Stone

Stephanie McIntosh

With every breath I breath you in and out With every touch I fall to deep in love With every look I lose a piece of my heart Yet I don't know who you are A strangers kiss is not a risk worth taking But I'd kiss you for sure anyway Why don't you steal this smile? But swear you won't leave me alone Or I would sink like a stone

Silently you slip in And totally change everything Suddenly I hear you breathing And now I am sinking like a stone

With every word You spell out destiny My world just spins Into a crazy dream With every hour We talk until it is light It's the perfect, perfect night I'd never wish for you to be mistaken But please god let you feel this way too Softly you steal a kiss I'm floored I am gone I am thrown And I would sink like a stone

Like a feather That has fallen right at your feet And like the rain That tries to quench the thirst of the summer heat What you say about a lifetime of someone to love? I am sinking like a stone Help me up
