

What's Wrong With Right Now

Steve Azar

Walk away from the walls that you've been bangin' on Lay down your down and low and wake up the dawn
Wish on your star and leave heartache alone
Well, if you're gonna do it you better get to it
For it's gone, long, long, gone

Save a little light while the sun is shinin'
Take a little trip past your horizon
And write another verse in your open book
Let everybody know every step you took on the way
How long can you say, that somehow someday
You're gonna turn it around, what's wrong with right now'

Go on and fill in that emptiness with a big ol' smile
Kick off your loneliness and just stay a while
Throw away your old clothes and get yourself some style
Well, here's your chance better go on and get it
For it's gone, long, long, gone

Save a little light while the sun is shinin'
Take a little trip past your horizon
And write another verse in your open book
Let everybody know every step you took on the way
How long can you say, that somehow someday
You're gonna turn it around' what's wrong with right now'

It's so perfectly timed, it's so silver lined
It' starin' you down, so what's wrong with right now'

How long can you say that somehow someday
You're gonna turn it around' what's wrong with right now'

Save a little light while the sun is shinin'
Take a little trip past your horizon
What's wrong with right now'
Save a little light while the sun is shinin'
Take a little trip past your horizon

Save a little light while the sun is shinin'
Take a little trip past your horizon
What's wrong with right now'
Save a little light while the sun is shinin'
Take a little trip past your horizon
