

Rest In The Wonder

Steve Green

Who heard You speak a word and watch the earth take form,
When out of nothing You created all we know?
Who saw the radiant glow of dawn on that first morn,
As beams of light shone upon the infant globe?
Oh, the vast and secret depths
The pleasure of Your will
When we reach our frail limits
We trust You still

We rest, rest in the wonder
Of all that You are
Fall down and worship You
We rest, rest in the wonder
Of all that You are
Fall down and worship You

Before the world began or earth's foundations laid
What did You see in us to draw Your loving gaze?
Though every heart would be a rebel throne
You set affection on this ruined soul
Oh, the vast and secret depths
The pleasure of Your will
When we reach our frail limits
We trust You still

We rest, rest in the wonder
Of all that You are
Fall down and worship You
We rest, rest in the wonder
Of all that You are
Fall down and worship You

What joy awaits your chosen bride
When heav'n and earth are new
Till every groan caused by the fall
Just fades away in You
