

You Don't Think That What You've Done is Wrong

The Strangers

You don't think that what you've done is wrong
No, you don't think that what you've done is wrong
I used to look up to you, we used to be friends
I used to laugh with you, but now the story ends

'cos you don't think that what you've done is wrong
no, you don't think that what you've done is wrong

I even lied for you, but now you want a divorce
The friends betrayed by you, but no sign of remorse

'cos you don't think that what you've done is wrong
no, you don't think that what you've done is wrong

I was taught loyalty to my friends Through thick and thin right to the end
In stormy weather yeah, when times get better yeah yeah

You don't think that what you've done is wrong
No, you don't think that what you've done is wrong
'cos you don't think that what you've done is wrong
no, you don't think that what you've done is wrong

you just don't think that what you've done you don't think that what you've done
you don't think that what you've done is wrong
