

Point of View

Subhumans

Read it in the paper the other day, but not the day before
Neither in the one that came after it, so it's out of sight once more
Everyone says it's too hot outside and the Canteen's gone downhill
The food ain't what it used to be, but I don't see 'em being ill

What was it the paper said, next to the top-less Girl?
Not but a picture of a starving kid in someone else's world
Christ, she looks almost anorexic
Give her some food before she dies!
In the macho banquet of anesthetic
Conscience starves as they feast their eyes

The bigger the picture the more it drives
Images into the front of the mind
While the back dries up from the lack of ambition
To think about sex and social position

You have to look further if you want to see more
Then think a bit harder than you ever did before
If something is wrong and it makes you think twice
You've got the incentive to act
It's your choice
