Waste of Breath

Subhumans

You paint your leather jacket but it comes off in the rain And the more you cut your hair the more it grows again The badges you pin on yourself fall off or start to rust And the more they take the piss the less people you can trust

It's the story of your life
And the end of it's your death
And every word that's in between
Is just a waste of breath

You don't know who you might have been or who you now should be Or what you ought to write on walls or why you wanna be free And then you start to panic cos the inspiration's there But your not sure how to use it anyway and no one seems to care

You're the classic all-round failure who never seems to win You'd like to write a book but you're not sure how to begin It's the story of your life
And the end of it's your death
And every word that's in between is just a waste of breath
