

And You Tell Me

Sugar

Another person in my skin
Claw and scratch me from within
I hear a voice inside the din, I know
And you tell me

In my delusions I devise
A different face with different eyes
The revolutions start inside, I know
And you tell me

I might be crazy over you
And you tell me
No excuse to lose it over you
And you tell me
So impatient wait to light the fuse
And you tell me

Laying on the sanitarium floor
And you tell me
Living with a cell mate I ignore
And it kills me
With fingers clamped so tightly round my head
And you tell me

I set the house on fire explode
Into the driveway as you go
And you don't answer anymore, I know
And you tell me

To pull it out and put it in
Another person in my skin
I wish that I could go again, I know
And you tell me

And as I feed upon myself
I know it's me and no one else
You know, you know
And you tell me

Across a bridge of frozen ice
Is there a lake of bad advice?
You know, you know
And you tell me
