Company Book

Everyone loves the company man With his company book in his hand The songs inside the company book Do not deserve a look They are rules in and of themselves

Everyone knows the company man He lets etiquette play his every hand Maybe twenty years ago He didn't show His love of rules in and of themselves

In the epilogue the company man Takes his company life with his company hands In his revelation he decrees Extinction of faceless robots like himself Spawned from the company book