

Wasted Lands

SuidAkrA

Tireless I faced my way
The flames still burned
To see the stars and dales My heart still yearned for

Surrounded by bleakness Osseous trees seemen to Seize the silence

A plain of ruins winds of dust tried to enshroud
All Remembrance

A doleful figure cowered
At the heart of this wasted lands his bowed head a mere skull the yield of dust in his hands

" I dwell beyond all fear and here in my liefeless claw shall grow your given seed the everlasting flaw "

On the ground of his eyes I saw a child drowned in fear In the deep he beheld the airy play Of those who can fly while fear turned into hate

Woe betide him and his tainted eyes
Seeds of despair won't grow with tears of dust
So I left this wilted man and his vale of woe
To Resume my own path of dole
