

Stone Man

Syd Matters

Green is arguing with yellow
In a submarine beneath the flow
Far from the electric lives
Fighting with my midnight knives

And I wonder if I could have known
I wonder if they drown, swilling down in the ocean
Feeding in the water

I have heard about a fable once when I was young
About a man being able to turn into stone
But I've never been a believer
And I never will

Give up all your dreams
Don't let them grow
Throw away your wishes
No you'll never know
Cut them into pieces
Burn them in a row

I have heard about a fable once when I was young
About a man being able to turn into stone
But I've never been a believer
And I never will

I feel like a rock now
Like a stone man
Nothing's gonna break me
Nothing's gonna change them

Like a rock now
Like a stone man
Nothing's gonna break me
Nothing's gonna change them
