Stone Man

Syd Matters

Green is arguing with yellow In a submarine beneath the flow Far from the electric lives Fighting with my midnight knives

And I wonder if I could have known I wonder if they drown, swilling down in the ocean Feeding in the water

I have heard about a fable once when I was young About a man being able to turn into stone But I've never been a believer And I never will Give up all your dreams Don't let them grow Throw away your wishes No you'll never know Cut them into pieces Burn them in a row

I have heard about a fable once when I was young About a man being able to turn into stone But I've never been a believer And I never will

I feel like a rock now Like a stone man Nothing's gonna break me Nothing's gonna change them

Like a rock now Like a stone man Nothing's gonna break me Nothing's gonna change them
