

The Fall

Taylor Hicks

It's funny how my life changes with the snow takes a long, hard solid state of gold all the times I look it still occurs to me just passing time, trying not to mind set my spirit free there's a place and time for everything when the good gets going bad and every time I try to look and hide it leaves you lonely, feeling blue, and feeling sad here it comes just rushing in the distant smile replied, a distant grin it's not so bad after all I climbed the ladder, and you took the fall you took the fall light on my feet I'm walking down my steps are heavier to lessening frown soon I'll be gone so pay me no mind there's always the worries wasting time, and ways to whine

here it comes just rushing in
after all I climbed the ladder, baby, and you took the fall you took the fall feelings will pass and soon have to go the colder the heart, the harder the wind blow although you're trying to make your own throughway you turn your back on love with the games that people play here it comes just rushing in the distant smile replies, a distant grin it's not so bad after all I climbed the ladder, baby, and you took the fall you took the fall, took the fall
