

The Harmony Of Imperfection

The Awakening

Oh angel break this lucid strand
I'm shaking like a hologram
Just need me like you held me once before

I feel the fibres of your dreams They shimmer sideways and in between the hurting hours I'm right back at the door

It's insane

But Walls come down
I'm here waiting for my resurrection
You're so clean yet so grey

Walls come down
like the Harmony of Imperfection Breathe the moonlight in and pray

They chase me down the mountain face with sabres drawn and eyes ablaze Awake again? but the night has lost it's glow

It's constant delibertaion Is emotion mutilation?
The scalped falls, the only words are "No!"

But Walls come down
I'm here contemplating all creation
You're so clean yet so grey

All I need is a little more than confirmation that "everything is better in the day"

Oh angel we could steal the morning Keep it bound and gagged from calling out the insults in it's muted score

Is this only desperation?
to want to share this deprivation What am I waiting for?

But Walls come down
I'm here waiting for my resurrection
You're so clean yet so grey

I believe in the Trinity and the great commission Walk that rocky narrow way

Walls come down
like the Harmony of Imperfection Breathe the moonlight and pray

All I need
is a little more than confirmation
that "everything is better in the day"