When you touch my hand I get a feeling in my feet That I will never understand Why it is That I can feel this way and be so young I'm so in love with you But can you trust me? Can you trust me? I know, in my past There has been proof that I'm a man Who sometimes likes to play around But you should know The time has come and you're the woman That I sure would love to love But can you trust me? Can you trust me? I've had so many girls before But they all left me wanting More than they'll ever hope to give They weren't like you They weren't like you Nothing like you I hope that I will Not ever catch myself With thoughts of being with another girl You're the one And now we're two I hope that you can be the one to equal me But can you trust me? Can you trust me? Can you trust me? Can you trust me?
