With my face drained of colour And my brain of blood Like Billy Budd I'm lashed to the grating; With senses growing duller And with quaking heart I make a start At temperature equating And my lungs suck useless air.

Like paraplegic dancers In formation team My understanding seem s Hiidebound in its movements, Contemplating answers That could break my bonds— To be half wrong Would be, in me, improvement ... But my comprehensive faculties are impaired.

And it seems absurd, but now all I've heard Fades in empty word s and is worthless As the Human Laugh rocks the cenotaph But the joke is half-true, and mirthless.

Trying to trace a reason From the spinning words But all I've h eard Seem at odds with their meanings, Phonetically pleasing Bu t delivered in such haste That in their place My mind commences screaming.

On the verge of belief I crash onto the reef And a cynical thie f steals my senses, So I cling to the pew with dimensions askew, And recognition refuses present tenses. All the lives of the saints demonstrate that my faint Is a minor complaint, but the end is Nowhere in sight, Why can't I find me a way to go?

I don't want to die in the nave, But I know it may be with me s ome day So I've got to find a way I can save up My evergies, an d find a cause to pray So something for something To which I can give my creed...

I'd gladly succumb to the wave, If I thought the water taught a way to light; I'd gladly succumb--I'm not brave, And it's easy to believe what the preacher says Except for the conflict raging between my head And my brain. I don't want to die, but just the same-- Some day....

Waiting for that moment That I know will come When I'll have to run And find another sermon... Everyman and Norman And the tal king priest—— Still, I am at least Holding all the doors open. Inside me all outside is shared.

As the cracked bells peal it all seems unreal But the seventh s eal stays unbroken And the Offertory plate tenders no escape—Still I refuse to scrape up a token Of esteem for these false A lleyways of the course; I must try to divorce sense from sensin g. Tell me again, Tell me the way to go.

So when I talk to myself Although I take good care to listen My heart	grows	ever	more	faint	There's	something	missing?