

Twice As Good

The Cassandra Complex

I have the most beautiful girl in the world
But I still want another
You're not the best, I know that's true
But you're here right now and I want you
Lay your hand upon my thigh
Look into my changing eyes
Cause someday we are going to die
So tell me now you will be mine

Tell me now, I've never understood
Why love should be between just two
When another would be twice as good
And both could love me as they should
Another would be twice as good

I still don't know if it's really true
But what's more true than to be with you?
What's more true than the fire of desire?
What's more true than desire for you?

Tell me now, I've never understood
Why love should be between just two
When another would be twice as good
And both could love me as they should
Another would be twice as good

They tell me love is only real
When two people meet and share what they feel
But if love's so good...
We should do it all the time

Tell me now, I've never understood
Why love should be between just two
When another would be twice as good
And both could love me as they should
Another would be twice as good