Fly Home

The Church

Listen
Collect your thoughts, don't hide
If you can't face yourself, collide
The blue sheen of sky dazzles your eyes
And leaves you slumped against the night

They captured you, chopped off your hand Left for dead And buried your body in sun-soaked sand Fly home

Is there patience where you think
Only empty arms to take you in
Pale luminescent glare
Surrounds you 'til you can't see it's there

Uncoiled flag below the wind A torn head You can't come out 'cause you're so far in Fly home

Ancient in the image cast Reminds you the future's like the past Time split into equal spheres Haunting you, using up your fear

Something hateful in your head Then kick it out You're scullin' hard but your wings are dead Fly home
